News: More than 100,000 cases are currently announced each day in the United States, a figure that captures only a portion of the true toll. Cases are increasing in more than half of all states, but there are signs of improvement in the Northeast and Midwest. The Omicron sub-variants known as BA.4 and BA.5 now represent 13 percent of new coronavirus cases in the United States, up from 7.5 percent a week ago and 1 percent in early May, according to new estimates from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The spread of the sub-variants adds more uncertainty to the trajectory of the pandemic in the United States, where current case counts are likely to be a significant underestimate. But whether it leads to a major new wave of infections, or spikes in hospitalizations and deaths, remains unclear, scientists cautioned.

We have resumed the donning of N-95 masks here at CBNHC and we ask you all to mask up when out in public and please remain vigilant. This is the beginning of the 5th wave of covid for our country, and we plead with you all to stay safe- mask up & avoid crowds!
